THE HISTORY OF THE

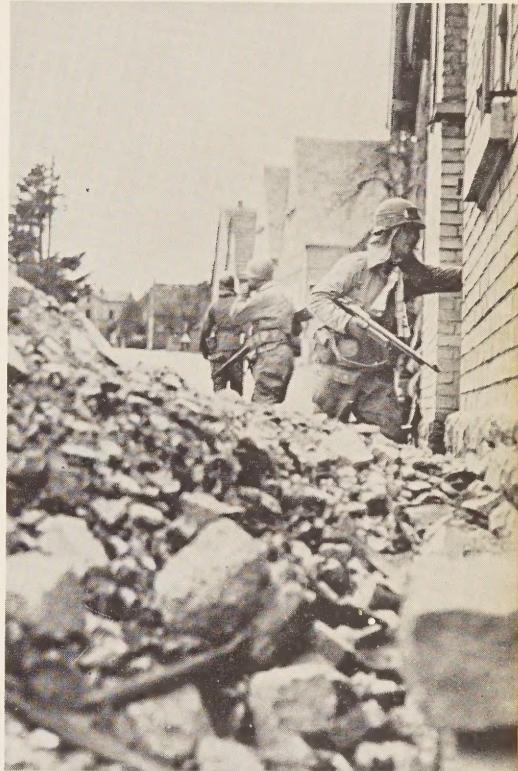

ARMORED DIVISION

"The accomplishments of this division have never been equalled. And by that statement I do not mean in this war, I mean in the history of warfare. There has never been such a superb fighting organization as the 4th Armored Division."

—GENERAL GEORGE S. PATTON

It was on the sandy plains of Pine Camp (now Camp Drum), New York, that the 4th Armored Division came into being at 1805 hours on April 15, 1941, when Brigadier General (now Major General, retired) Henry W. Baird read orders of activation shortly after the initial complement of 600 officers and 3,200 enlisted men reached the camp. The assembly stood rigidly at attention while the flag was raised, the orders read and the new division's first retreat ceremony held.

Moving Out From Bastogne

After organization, the division trained at Pine Camp under the guidance of General Baird and later Major General John S. Wood. Following training assignments in Tennessee, California, and Texas, the 4th Armored sailed for England on December 29, 1943.

The division landed on Utah Beach on the Cherbourg Peninsula of France in July, 1944, or D-Day-Plus-36. Forces of the 4th Armored then struck due south and broke through opposition at St. Lo, Avranches and Rennes. The division swung west and bottled up Nazi forces in the submarine base at Lorient.

Turning east, division forces swung back through Nantes and Angers, overran stiff opposition at Orleans and smashed on to the Seine, where another important engagement was fought and won at Troyes.

The 4th Armored then crossed the Marne and Meuse Rivers and fought a series of rugged battles near Bayen before being called on to relieve the 101st Airborne Division at Bastogne, Belgium.

Battling doggedly to the northwest, the division relieved the 101st. Then after pulling back to Luxemburg City to regroup, the 4th Armored struck north toward Koblenz on the Rhine and then rolled southeastward through Bad Kreuznach, crossing the Rhine north of Worms and the Main near Hanau.

The division's forces then rolled northeastward to Weimar before turning eastward, then southeastward to sweep down through Bayreuth. The division swung to the northeast and into Czechoslovakia toward Prague after getting as far south in Germany as the Regensburg-Deggendorf area.

It was while the division was in Czechoslovakia that World War II ended in Europe. During the war, the 4th Armored became the only armored division in the U. S. Army to receive the Distinguished Unit Citation (for "extraordinary tactical accomplishments," most notably the race to Bastogne), and the second division in the Army's history to be so decorated by order of the President. The division was also awarded the French Fourragere for its victories at Avranches, Nantes and in the Moselle area.

Men and officers of the 4th Armored won more than 4,000 individual decorations during World War II. Three were Congressional Medals of Honor. In addition, 34 Distinguished Service Crosses, 802 Silver Stars, 3,031 Bronze Stars, 88 Air Medals, 11 Soldier's Medals and 72 Croix de Guerre were awarded.

Following cessation of hostilities, the division was deactivated on March 4, 1946, at which time its elements became the headquarters and units of the Constabulary. Eight years later, on June 15, 1954, the 4th Armored again became an active force, this time at Fort Hood, Texas, when Brigadier General John K. Waters was presented the famous colors of the division by Fourth U. S. Army Commander Lieutenant General I. D. White.

The division has been commanded successively since that time by Major General Thomas J. H. Trapnell, Major General William N. Gillmore, Brigadier General Paul Disney, Major General Verdi B. Barnes and the present Commanding General, Major General Andrew P. O'Meara, who assumed command of the division at Fort Hood on August 1, 1957. General O'Meara is not a newcomer to the 4th Armored Division, having been assigned to the division in its early days at Pine Camp. During his assignment, General O'Meara commanded the 94th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, which has since been redesignated the 2d Howitzer Battalion, 14th Artillery, a present-day organic unit of the 4th Armored.

Since reactivation nearly four years ago, the 4th Armored has participated in various large-scale field exercises in the United States, including exercise "SAGE BRUSH" in late 1955 in Louisiana. The division has since trained over 7,500 "packet trainees" for armored units which were then already in Europe. With completion of that mission in June, 1957, the 4th Armored turned its attention to training its own men for Gyroscope to Germany.

On December 13, 1957, the colors of the 4th Armored Division were again unfurled on European soil, exactly 13 years and five months after the division's first command post was established on the European Continent during World War II. However, this time instead of being met by an armed enemy, the 4th Armored was greeted by a friendly ally.

Since arriving in Europe, the division has participated in several winter field training exercises, including "SABRE HAWK," the largest field training exercise conducted in the theater since the end of World War II. In March, elements of the division again moved to the field to participate in the NATO CPX "LION BLEU." In June, CPX "FULL PLAY" again saw division elements in the field.

The men of the 4th Armored now training at Grafenwöhr as well as at their home stations are of the same caliber as the men who made up the 4th Armored during World War II. Of the latter, General Patton said: "The accomplishments of this division have never been equalled. And by that statement I do not mean in this war. I mean in the history of warfare. There has never been such a superb fighting organization as the 4th Armored Division."

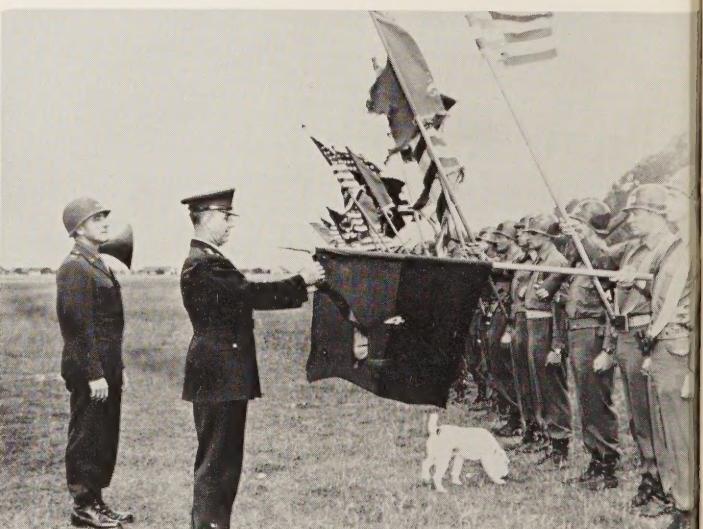

Here in Europe, the 4th Armored Division continues to pursue a vigorous and exacting field training program, proudly taking its place in the defensive shield of NATO.

MEDAL OF HONOR

WORLD WAR II

FIELDS, JAMES H. (1st Lt), Rechicourt, France, 4th Armored Division, 27 September 1944. Although his platoon had been seriously depleted and he himself had been rendered speechless by wounds, he continued to lead them by hand signals. He attended to a wounded man and then silenced two enemy machine-gun positions, inspiring his small force to continue forward.

HENDRIX, JAMES R. (S/Sgt), Near Assenois, Belgium, 4th Armored Division, 26 December 1944. Alone he advanced against two 88-mm. guns and, by the ferocity of his rifle fire, forced the enemy to surrender. Later, he aided two wounded soldiers who were helpless and exposed to intense machine-gun fire and then rescued still another soldier who was trapped in a burning half-track.

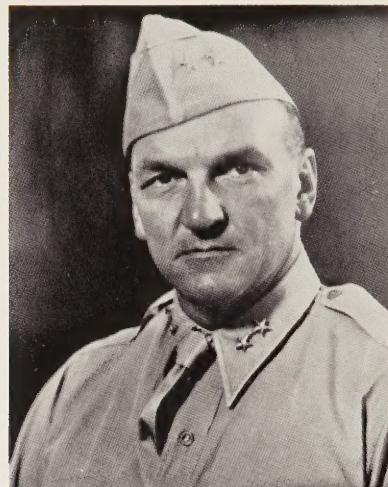

SADOWSKI, JOSEPH J. (Sgt), Valhey, France, 4th Armored Division, 14 September 1944. After ordering his crew to dismount when his tank was disabled and burst into flames, he discovered that one of the crew members had been unable to leave the tank. Despite a hail of enemy small arms, bazooka, grenade, and mortar fire, he unhesitatingly returned to the tank and endeavored to save his comrade. While engaged in the attempt, he was killed by enemy machine-gun fire.

A MESSAGE FROM THE COMMANDER

HEADQUARTERS 4th ARMORED DIVISION
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDING GENERAL

30 August 1958

TO THE OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE 4TH ARMORED DIVISION:

This book is a pictorial review of the personnel, the activities, and the accomplishments of the 4th Armored Division, with emphasis upon the period dating from Gyroscope notification in 1957 at Fort Hood through current activities here in Germany.

It is with particular pride that I, as your division commander, trace in the pages of this book the training achievements of the division. From basic training at Fort Hood, through Exercise Sabre Hawk to the current battalion tests, the continuous and progressive improvement shown by the division has been most gratifying.

It is only through the individual and combined efforts of each of us that we of the 4th Armored Division are able to accomplish our mission, as an armored striking force instantly ready and able to deter or defeat aggression, in a manner typical of our World War II predecessors.

I have every confidence in the ability of the 4th Armored Division to perform, with distinction, any task assigned.

DIVISION TRAINS

Colonel
Eugene C. Orth, Jr.
Commanding Officer
Division Trains

During the period of my command, 15 February 1957 - 4 August 1958, Division Trains Units were engaged in many activities in addition to their normal support missions. These activities included packet training of replacements for the 3d Armored Division Trains, reception and training of their own replacements, preparation and execution of Gyroscope movement to Germany. Within two weeks after arriving in Germany, Division Trains Units entered into the full-scale Army winter maneuver, SABRE HAWK, and supported the Division in the field. All these missions were carried out in a military, orderly, creditable manner.

For the future, remember that an armored division must be able to move, shoot, communicate, and maintain itself. You are the principal aids to the division in enabling the combat units to do these functions. You also have to perform them. I know that you will utilize your past experiences to improve yourselves and continue to do your best.

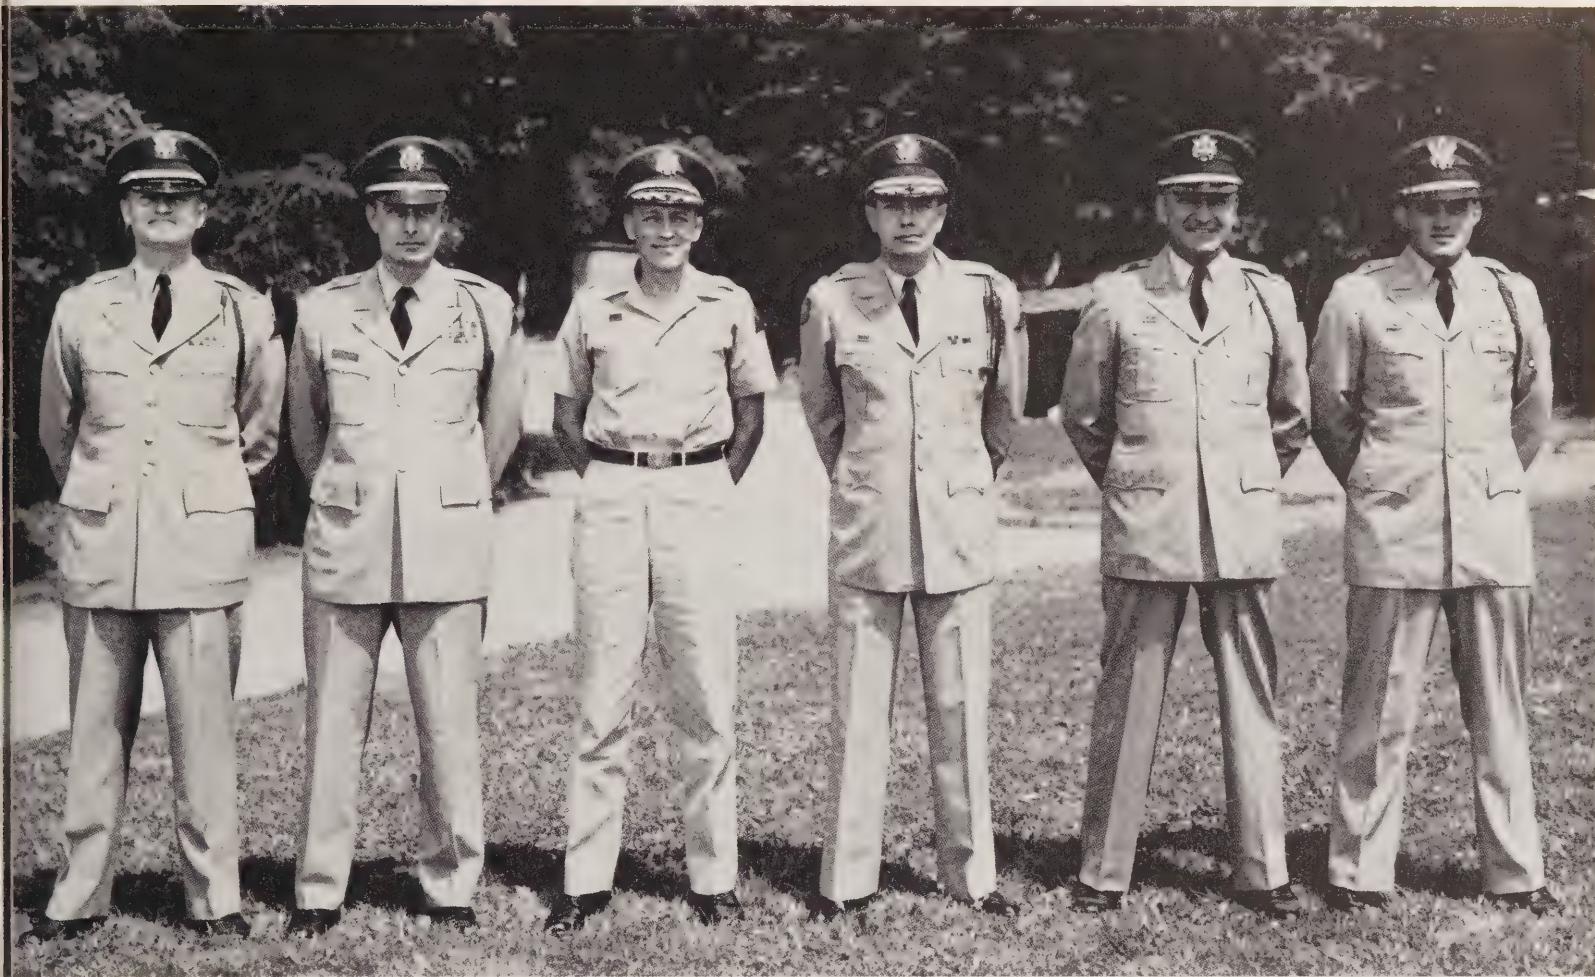

It was professionally rewarding and a source of personal satisfaction to have been your commander during the period mentioned above and I wish you continued success in your future endeavours.

Colonel
Jack F. Wilhm

HEADQUARTERS CCA. 4TH ARMORED DIVISION
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDER

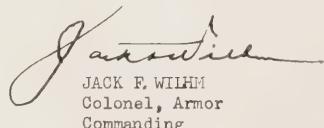

APO 35

US FORCES

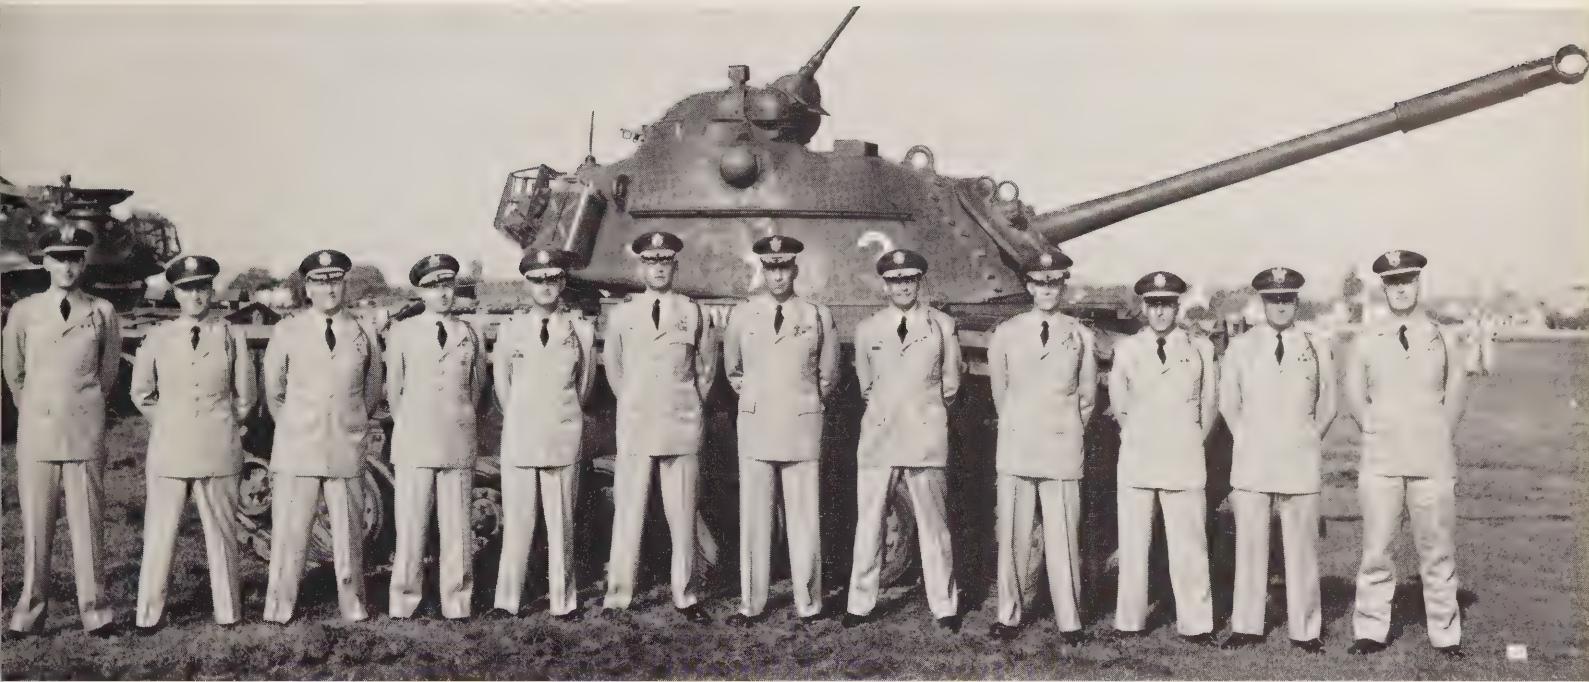

TO THE OFFICERS AND MEN OF COMBAT COMMAND "A":

It was one of the highlights of my army career to assume command of Combat Command "A", 4th Armored Division on 27 February of this year. Since my assumption of command, we have been through numerous and rugged field training exercises. The hours have been long and tedious, and the weather and terrain have not always been ideal. We have trained together in realistic combat-type conditions as facilities and the situations permitted. I am sincerely proud of all of you and am personally gratified in knowing that we have achieved a state of combat readiness comparable with any other combat element of the United States Army in the European Command.

I hope that you, just as I, will look back with pride on our service tours together in Combat Command "A", 4th Armored Division... one of the finest fighting teams ever assembled in the history of the United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS COMBAT COMMAND B
FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION
APO 66 U.S. FORCES
OFFICE OF THE COMBAT COMMANDER

TO: The Officers, Noncommissioned Officers and Men of Combat Command "B", 4th Armored Division

It was my good fortune to assume command of CC "B" in April 1957 when the headquarters was restored to the 4th Armored Division after participation in Exercise King Cole in Louisiana. Since that time we have successfully responded to a challenge not often met in peace time by members of the United States Army. I refer to the preparation and movement of our units to Germany from Fort Hood, Texas, which was completed in December 1957.

I have noted with interest and pleasure the transformation that has taken place in our organization since we assembled at Fort Hood. We have progressed from a group of individuals with varying years of service and experience to a highly organized and trained group of units whom the Seventh Army Commander has seen fit to characterize as combat ready.

In the process of becoming combat ready CC "B" was the guinea pig for the division. We were the first command to commence training and preparation for Gyroscope and in every instance we were the first command to meet the many tests that were devised by division to determine our progress and eventually our readiness. The experience we gained by sweat, and occasionally unshed tears, was shared with the remainder of the division.

Our accomplishments have been many. Our units have contributed materially to the high regard in which the 4th Armored Division is held in Germany. However, we must do more in order to insure that we will be effective as a combat force. Superior combat units are first in all things. There are some firsts in training, athletics and other activities which we must obtain. I urge you to set about attaining these firsts quickly and convincingly.

COMBAT COMMAND "C"
4TH ARMORED DIVISION
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDING OFFICER

TO: The Officers, Noncommissioned Officers and Men of Combat Command "C", 4th Armored Division.

On 6 August 1957, I assumed command of Combat Command C and since that time it has been my honor and pleasure to be associated with you in numerous and varied military activities both in the United States and here in Europe. I have observed with pride, your progress from an organization composed primarily of raw recruits, to one possessing professional competence unequalled by any similar military unit.

It is my sincere hope that this book will, in years to come, serve as a constant reminder of a useful, rewarding and pleasant period in your lives, and that it will enable you to relive many enjoyable, and at times, humorous experiences. If indeed, this is the case, then the publication will have served its purpose.

I extend to each of you my most sincere appreciation for your wholehearted support and valiant efforts, and wish you continued success in the years to come.

4th ARMORED DIVISION ARTILLERY

Brigadier General
William F. Ryan
Commanding General

HEADQUARTERS 4TH ARMORED DIVISION ARTILLERY
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDING GENERAL
APO 696 US ARMY

31 August 1958

To the Officers and Men of the 4th Armored Division Artillery:

Since assuming command of the 4th Armored Division Artillery in August 1957, I have witnessed the transformation of the command from a group of individuals into a highly trained, combat ready team.

After a condensed period of basic training, we spent the few remaining months at Fort Hood in training for and taking Battery and Battalion Army Training Tests and in preparing for the impending gyroscope move to Europe. Time was limited and we were forced to work at an accelerated pace through the training period. We worked with the same intensity and the same demanding schedule as a division preparing for immediate combat. Each unit successfully completed its test and processed for overseas movement. The fine results obtained by all units and the spirit with which you tackled your jobs gave an indication of more outstanding things to come.

Upon our arrival in Europe, we assumed our responsibilities as an essential major element on the first line of defense of the free world. Shortly after our arrival we moved out on exercise "SABRE HAWK" which gave us the much needed experience in movement over the German countryside.

During the past spring and summer we arrived at a high point in our training. Each battery and battalion took and successfully completed its prescribed training tests. The scores attained indicate a high degree of artillery proficiency and prove conclusively that we are a combat ready outfit. We are capable of providing superior artillery support for our sister arms, the infantry and armor. Our success has been due to the combined efforts of the team as a whole. We have followed the principle of informing every individual in the command as to the problems facing us and then properly guiding our efforts as each man willingly put his shoulder to the wheel.

I wish to commend each officer and man in Division Artillery for a job well done. Our continued success will remain the responsibility of each of us.

GRAF

Grafenwöhr — First used by Bavarian princes for training their cavalry, this major training area was used by German troops during World War I and more recently by Rommel's famed Afrika Korps and Hitler's personal SS guards. To men of the 4th Armored, this 100 square miles of forest, swamp, mud and dust will always be remembered as the arena for some of their toughest and most intensive training.

OPERATION GYROSCOPE

The Army term for a vast troop movement such as brought the 4th Armored Division to Germany to replace the 2d Armored Division. In moving overseas, the 4th Armored Division utilized the General ships "BUTNER," "BUCKNER," "DARBY," "UPSHUR," "RANDALL," "ROSE" and "PATCH," in addition to moving many troops by air.
